Introduction

The William Henry Cardinal O'Connell Papers held by the Archives of the Archdiocese of Boston cover the years from 1876 to 1945. Although there is some material for the earlier portion of that time span, the largest concentration of papers is in the period between 1907, when O'Connell became Archbishop of Boston, and his death in 1944. The papers, which number approximately 10,000 items, are contained in twenty [20] manuscript boxes, occupying ten [10] linear shelf feet.

This collection represents the "personal" papers of Cardinal O'Connell. Because Archbishops of Boston as individuals combine official, administrative spiritual, and personal functions, it is often difficult to define precisely what constitute their specifically personal papers, as distinct from the other records of their tenure. In the case of the O'Connell Papers, however, the distinction is fairly clear cut. These personal papers were maintained separately from the other correspondence at the time of their creation and original filing in the Cardinal's office. The vast majority of all the records held by the Archives date from the O'Connell era [the parish and institution correspondence files, for example], but the Archives has maintained these papers separately according to the arrangement that was created by O'Connell himself and his secretaries. Thus, the personal papers constitute a well defined body of material, containing those records that do not relate to O'Connell's duties as the chief administrator of the Archdiocese. These papers were not always as internally orderly as they might have been: there were several concurrent alphabetical arrangements, for example, and a number of vague and overlapping subject categories. But their personal nature clearly separated them from the rest of the vast amount of documentation generated by the O'Connell episcopate.

Although these papers deal with subjects which O'Connell handled personally, a number of other names will frequently appear as signatories of outgoing letters. As a matter of office procedure, the Cardinal used several secretaries and assistants who answered letters, even personal letters, for him. In such cases, the secretary would begin his letter with a phrase like "His Eminence, the Cardinal, directs me to say," and would close by signing his own name. A succession of men, all priests of the Archdiocese, performed these functions, it is their names that will appear here. They include: James P. E. O'Connell; Charles J. Sullivan; Richard J. Haberlin; Francis A. Burke; Francis L. Phalen; and Jeremiah F. Minihan. Although such letters were not signed by O'Connell himself, it is clear that all correspondence crossed his desk and that outgoing letters were prepared at his direction: an incoming letter will frequently contain notes for the response written in O'Connell's hand. These letters were, therefore, treated as personal by the Cardinal's office, and the Archives has retained that original in arranging them.

The O'Connell Papers are arranged in sixteen [16] major categories of varying sizes and compositions. Of these, #2 [General Correspondence, 1898-1944] is by far the largest and most significant, comprising eight manuscript boxes, nearly half the entire collection; #14 is the smallest, containing only five items relating to O'Connell's 1920-1923 income tax returns. This internal arrangement follows the original format of the personal papers at the time of their creation, although this format has been standardized and rationalized. The precise nature, contents, and arrangement of each of these sixteen categories is explained fully in the Scope and Content Note of this register.

The physical format of these letters varies. The original manuscript or typecript of incoming letters has been retained. Copies of outgoing letters are of two main types: "press" copies produced from the original that appear as blue ink on onion skin paper, and carbon copies on a yellow paper stock. In the case of severely deteriorated items, the Archives has made photocopies or transcripts and filed them with the original. Original photographs have been removed from the collection and are arranged with the Archives photograph collection [Record Group VIII.1]. A note indicating the presence of a photograph has been filed with the correspondence to which it pertains.

Scope and Content

The William Henry Cardinal O'Connell Papers, 1876-1945, reveal the wide and diverse nature of the personal correspondence of the man who was Boston's fifth bishop, second archbishop and first cardinal. O'Connell was a pivotal figure in the history of the Archdiocese; he was responsible for transforming the simple organization of his predecessors into an elaborate and efficient structure for meeting the demands and needs of the growing Catholic church in eastern Massachusetts. As such, O'Connell was the single most important creator of records and documentary material, the material that now forms the core of the collections of the Archives. The financial, personnel, and administrative control systems put into effect by O'Connell left large bodies of records in their wake.

In addition to performing the official duties and activities that occupied his 37-year reign as archbishop, O'Connell maintained a personal correspondence of enormous proportions. His local correspondents were as varied as the territory encompassed by the Archdiocese.¹ They included priests and nuns of the Archdiocese, Catholic lay men and women of all ranks, prominent local civic leaders, and members of a rather large social circle. Beyond this, his national and international correspondents were no less extensive, including popes, cardinals, presidents, authors, artists, religious and lay people from every conceivable background and situation. His position as the most prominent Catholic clergyman in the country and "dean" of the American hierarchy made him a natural focus of attention. He maintained an active interest in a number of special subjects, both religious and secular, that brought him into contact with many of the most prominent people of his day.

As nearly as can be reconstructed at the present time, O'Connell's internal office procedures were such that every piece of correspondence of whatever nature crossed his desk. A great many incoming letters bear his penciled notes, either in the upper left corner or on the back, from which his assistants would draft a complete response. Even those letters which were not answered were first examined and marked "No Ans." or simply "N.A." One can picture the Cardinal at his desk, reading each letter, marking out his response, and handing it to a waiting secretary. At times, in his absence, this same procedure seems to have been followed by others: many letters bear notes in the hand of the Reverend Richard J. Haberlin, for example, O'Connell's secretary and chancellor from 1916 to 1928. Many of O'Connell's personal letters, therefore, were not actually signed by him. They were, however, drafted at his direction and were considered to be personal. The Archives has maintained that arrangement by including them in this collection.

¹By this time the Archdiocese had assumed its present dimensions, consisting of the eastern third of Massachusetts:Essex, Middlesex, Suffolk, Norfolk, and Plymouth counties. In addition, O'Connell, because of his rank as archbishop, served as the metropolitan for the ecclesiastical province of New England, and therefore exercised general supervisory authority over the Dioceses of Portland, Maine; Manchester, New Hampshire; Burlington, Vermont; Springfield and Fall River, Massachusetts; Providence, Rhode Island; and Hartford, Connecticut.

What follows is a description of each of the sixteen categories into which the O'Connell Papers are divided. Each description will include the subject matter covered, the inclusive dates of the material, the size of that portion of the collection, and the particular method of arrangement, together with some indication of the contents.

I. Letters, 1876-1906. Boxes: 1-2. Folders: 12 [total]
Chronological.

This portion of the collection contains the manuscripts for the published edition of O'Connell's letters: The Letters of His Eminence William Cardinal O'Connell [Cambridge: Riverside Press, 1915]; Volume I: From College Days, 1876, to Bishop of Portland, 1901. Included also is the manuscript of the introductory letter [Dear M--], dated 1 October 1915, for that volume. The letters are all from O'Connell; there are no letters addressed to him. They are arranged chronologically.

The letters published as volume I begin with accounts of O'Connell's days as a student at St. Charles College, the Sulpician minor seminary in Baltimore, Maryland, in October 1876. They also contain descriptions of his life at home in Lowell during school vacations, his departure from St. Charles and subsequent enrollment at Boston College [1879], and his time in Rome as a student at the North American College [1881-1884]. They continue with his return to America for pastoral assignments in Medford and Boston's West End [1884-1895], his appointment and tenure as Rector of the North American College [1895-1901], and finally his appointment as Bishop of Portland in April 1901.

A strong oral tradition has always maintained that these letters are not authentic. This tradition says that, rather than being a collection of letters O'Connell had actually written in his younger years, they were written all at once in the early 1910s, shortly after his elevation to the Cardinalate, expressly for the purpose of publishing them in what was intended to be a multi-volume set. This volume I is in fact the only volume of published letters ever to appear.

Internal evidence from the manuscripts themselves strongly supports this view that the letters are not genuine. They are written on uniform sheets of paper, in a uniform hand, using a uniform ink. There is no indication that they were ever folded into envelopes or actually sent through the mails. Some of the manuscripts are undated, with pencil notations such as "Date?", written on them by O'Connell; the same letters appear in their published form fully identified. Sixteen of the letters, 1901-1905, are written in pencil, one after another, on small writing tablets. The phrasing and style clearly suggest that these letters were written long after the events they describe. These factors have led to the convention of referring to these letters as "spurious." The Archives has maintained them chronologically as they are dated. Some of the letters bear dates in their published version different from those on the manuscript. The Archives has also prepared typescripts for some of the letters, especially those in poor physical condition.

This collection also includes the typescripts of letters, dated between 1901 and 1906, that were obviously intended to form part or all of a published volume II, which never appeared. This second group of letters contains description of O'Connell's activities as Bishop of Portland and his trip around the world in 1905-1906 in his capacity as Papal Legate to the Emperor of Japan. The manuscript letters conclude with his appointment as Coadjutor Archbishop of Boston.

Despite their spurious nature, these letters may be useful in identifying the attitudes of O'Connell, later in life, toward his earlier career. As such, they are in some senses autobiographical.

2. General Correspondence, 1898-1944. Boxes: 3-11. Folders: 142 [total]
Alphabetical by correspondent.

This portion of the collection contains the bulk of the O'Connell correspondence, a total of more than 5,100 items. Included are incoming letters sent to O'Connell and whatever copy of the outgoing response was kept by him: press copy; carbon copy; or separately typed or handwritten copy. The correspondence is arranged alphabetically by correspondent, and chronologically within each name. See page General Correspondence of this Register for a complete list of correspondents.

The nearly 1200 individuals who corresponded with the Cardinal represent the widest imaginable list of acquaintances and friends. Priests of the Archdiocese are well represented, especially in the form of those who would write O'Connell offering greetings and presents [frequently in the form of money] on special occasions: Christmas, Easter, his birthday, the anniversary of his ordination or elevation to the episcopate. Other bishops and cardinals, from the United States and abroad, also appear in great numbers.² The bishops of the province of New England are naturally well represented, although bishops from all over the country appear, sometimes in considerable number [Emmanuel Ledvina of Corpus Christi, Texas, for example]. Letters from O'Connell's two principal auxiliary bishops, Francis J. Spellman and Richard J. Cushing, are not included here but are filed with the other records and papers of those two men elsewhere in the Archives. Among Roman cardinals, Raphael Merry del Val is the most consistent correspondent, represented by more than 100 items. Other frequent correspondents were Cardinals Cajetan DeLai, Pietro Gasparri, and Aidan Gasquet -- all of the Roman curia -- James Gibbons of Baltimore, and the other American cardinals of O'Connell's era: Denis Dougherty of Philadelphia, John Farley and Patrick Hayes of New York, and George Mundelein of Chicago. Members and superiors of religious orders from around the country are also included, as are several local Protestant churchmen [especially those associated with the Protestant Episcopal Church], including William Lawrence, Episcopal Bishop of Massachusetts.

Among lay people, the list of O'Connell correspondents contains as similar variety. Local political leaders are well represented, and include every Governor of Massachusetts and Mayor of Boston during the years of O'Connell's episcopate, as well as a number of Congressmen and Senators. These are most often of a purely formal nature -- invitations to attend various civic functions -- but with a few of these men O'Connell seems to have developed a more personal relationship. Governors Curtis Guild, Jr.,³ and Alvan T. Fuller stand out in this regard, as do Mayors Frederick Mansfield and Malcolm E. Nichols. The legendary James M. Curley is represented by approximately fifty items, although they are almost entirely of a formal, official nature; the few letters of John F. Fitzgerald are more substantial. National figures are also represented by Presidents and Secretaries of State, although these parts of the collection seem to have been the victims of loss or theft. [More on this will be said below]. In the same way, Catholic kings, queens, and nobles of Europe are represented, as are the political leaders of predominantly Catholic countries, including William Cosgrave and Eamon DeValera of Ireland and Benito Mussolini of Italy. O'Connell's years in Rome had brought him into contact with many members of the diplomatic corps, who continued to correspond with him years later: Francis Augustus MacNutt; Maurice Egan; Sir Esme Howard; Constantin von Neurath; and Mr. and Mrs. Bellamy Storer are examples of such contacts.⁴ In the same way, clerical contacts from the Roman days continued to keep in touch with O'Connell, especially Niccola Canali [secretary to Merry del Val] and Don Sante Tampieri.

O'Connell's correspondents include a number of prominent local businessmen and other lay leaders. Charles Francis Adams III and Joseph P. Kennedy, for example, are represented, although not extensively. U.S. Supreme Court Justice Pierce Butler and then-Harvard Law School professor Felix Frankfurter appear in a few items each, as does Harvard president A. Lawrence Lowell. The officers of Catholic lay organizations appear occasionally, including those affiliated with the Catholic Near East Welfare Association and the Catholic Church Extension Society. O'Connell was a close observer of Irish affairs, particularly at the time of the formation of the Irish Free State and the Irish Republic, and maintained regular contact with Irish-American leaders. Beyond this, "average" citizens wrote to O'Connell, because of his prominence, with a variety of personal problems and concerns.

² Purely ceremonial correspondence with other cardinals, usually taking the form of printed letters signed by them at Christmas time, have been filed in section #15 [Greetings from Cardinals, 1918-1943]. The more "substantive" letters with other cardinals are included here in section #2.

³ Guild is the only person in the entire correspondence who addressed his letters to O'Connell "My dear William."

Within this category, a number of particular concentrations of material stand out. O'Connell's relations with the leaders of Boston Brahmin society emerge from this correspondence as warm and extensive. His acquaintance with Isabella Stewart Gardner was a very friendly one, a relationship that was in turn transferred to her nephews, the Coolidges [Archibald, Harold, and Julian --all of them connected with Harvard University]. Florence Garretson Spooner, a Beacon Hill Anglo-Catholic active in prison reform and other civic causes, wrote him regularly [sometimes weekly] and he never failed to respond. Maria Longworth [Mrs. Bellamy] Storer was perhaps the Cardinal's most prominent convert, who continued to write him long after her husband's death; Charlotte [Mrs. Curtis] Guild occupied a similar position. The significance of these contacts between O'Connell, the representative of the vast and growing Irish church in Boston, and the representatives of the older, established Boston culture cannot be overestimated.

O'Connell was frequently asked to make financial contributions to a number of worthy causes. Although most correspondence of this nature is filed in section #9 [Charitable Donations, 1907-1944] some letters containing references to such contributions appear here. O'Connell seems to have been a regular supporter of Catholic missionary activities in India, for instance, as the number of letters from missionary bishops there indicates [Aloysius Benziger, Vincent Dereer, Louis Morrow, and Francis Roche]. He also made frequent donations to support missionary activities in China, Japan, the Philippines, and the Near East.

O'Connell's literary and artistic tastes and abilities also brought him into contact with a number of correspondents. Among authors, Shane Leslie is represented in the collection by more than 100 items, with Hillaire Belloc and Seumas MacManus also present in lesser numbers. Local newspaper columnist Robert Washburn is represented by nearly 200 items. Among artists, August Benziger and Pierre Chaignon de la Rose figure prominently in the collection. There is some correspondence with Gardiner Lane of Boston's Museum of Fine Arts, and also with Charles Sargent of the Arnold Arboretum and Bradford Washburn of the Museum of Natural History [later known as the Museum of Science]. In a somewhat different vein, both Harry Frazee of the Boston Red Sox and George Grant of the Boston Braves wrote to the Cardinal, giving him season passes to their respective ballparks.⁵ There is no extensive correspondence with prominent musicians of the time, although there are a number of requests from various sources for copies of the Cardinal's own musical compositions. None of the original music manuscripts of the hymns the Cardinal wrote survive.

Something must be said about those aspects of the correspondence which indicate the existence and vigor of those who might be considered Cardinal O'Connell's opponents. Monsignor John O'Brien of Sacred Heart parish, East Cambridge, is certainly such a person. This portion of the collection contains bitter exchanges between the two men, sparked by the success of O'Brien's popular devotional magazine, The Sacred Heart Review [usually at the expense of the official archdiocesan newspaper, The Pilot]. Similarly, there is a very testy exchange with Monsignor John A. Ryan of the National Catholic Welfare Conference's Social Action Department. A great volume of angry letters was generated in the early 1930s when O'Connell denounced the radio preaching of Father Charles Coughlin; that correspondence is not included here, however, but has been left where it was originally filed, in the Chancery Special Subject Files [Record Group III.G.01].

In the same way, this general correspondence contains some material from O'Connell friends and allies, describing the activities of his opponents. There is one letter from Bishop Patrick Heffron of Winone, Minnesota, describing an attempt to embarrass O'Connell at the 1921 meeting of the American hierarchy in the aftermath of the scandal created by the resignation and disappearance of Monsignor James O'Connell, the Cardinal's nephew and Chancellor of the Archdiocese. This is one of the few references, direct or indirect, to this affair in the collection. The Reverend Charles M. Driscoll, an American Augustinian, would frequently write O'Connell from Rome, detailing the activities of O'Connell's curial opponents and urging him to respond to them. The importance of such correspondence should not be overemphasized, but neither should it be overlooked in attempting to reconstruct a full picture of O'Connell and his times.

This Register contains two listings for this portion of the collection. The first gives an alphabetical list of folder headings of the correspondents. The second lists each individual and itemizes each letter by date and the number of pages. An index to this second list has been prepared.

⁵ There is no clear evidence that O'Connell took advantage of their offers by attending, although he did provide encomiums on "the good old American game of baseball."

3. Papal Documents. 1895-1944. Boxes: 19-20 [oversize]. Folders: 9 [total] Chronological.

This portion of the collection contains the correspondence between O'Connell and the reigning pontiffs of his age: Leo XIII [1878-1903], who appointed him Rector of the North American College and later Bishop of Portland; Plus X [1903-1914], who appointed O'Connell Archbishop of Boston and then raised him to the rank of Cardinal; Benedict XV [1914-1922]; Pius XI [1922-1939]; and Pius XII [1939-1958]. This portion of the collection contains 161 Items. Because many of these documents are of large physical dimensions, this entire category of the O'Connell Papers has been placed in oversize boxes, numbered 19 and 20. A descriptive list of each item in this portion of the collection has been prepared.

The papal correspondence consists largely of ceremonial items. It was customary for the Pope and the members of the College of Cardinals to exchange formal greetings at Christmas, and most of the documents here are of that nature. This correspondence usually takes the form of a message [in Latin or Italian] handwritten by a secretary and signed by the Pope. Also included are formal papal bulls of appointment and announcements of the appointment of others to the episcopal rank.

A handful of papal autograph letters are also included: Pius X to O'Connell, Easter Sunday 1909 and 31 March 1911; and Plus XI [Achille Cardinal Ratti] to O'Connell, 23 October 1928 and 29 July 1933. The correspondence with Pius XII [Eugenlo Cardinal Pacelli] is much more extensive, including the entire period of his tenure as Secretary of State for his predecessor, Pius XI. Most of the material naturally deals with his duties in that capacity; there are only seven items from the period of Pacelli's pontificate.

This portion of the collection is Important principally for its artifactual value and for the autographs It contains. It does not shed significant light on the personal relations between O'Connell and the Popes under whom he served.

4. Family Correspondence. 1915-1937. Box: 12. Folders: 1-4. Alphabetical.

This portion of the collection contains correspondence between O'Connell and members of his more or less immediate family. The letters, both incoming and outgoing, were maintained separately in the files of O'Connell's office as "Family Letters," and the Archives has retained this arrangement.

The bulk of these letters are between the Cardinal and the family of his older brother Edward. There are a few items with Edward himself, although most are exchanges with his son Edward, a Boston banker, and daughters Alice, Anna, and Josephine. "Uncle Willie" [as he sometimes signed himself] apparently paid for the girls' schooling at the Sacred Heart Academy In Manhattanville, New York, and they would correspond with him to keep him informed of their scholastic progress. During their study of foreign languages, for example, the exchanges would sometimes be in French or Italian. The Cardinal also seems to have financed tours of Europe for these nieces. Joseph O'Connell acted as an informal financial advisor to his uncle in later years: he was named one of the executors of the Cardinal's estate. There is only one letter from the more notable nephew, Monsignor James O'Connell, Included in a letter of Joseph.

This collection also contains items from a number of other relatives, both from the United States and Ireland. In the absence of a detailed O'Connell family genealogy, it is difficult to establish precisely who these people were and what was their relationship to the Cardinal. The fact that O'Connell's secretaries filed these items with the family correspondence is presumptive, though not conclusive, evidence that some relationship did exist.

These letters highlight the Cardinal's relations with the members of his family and also contain tangential information of a social historical nature.

5. Personal Roman Correspondence. 1907-1943.Boxes: 12-13. Folders: 22 [total].

Chronological.

This portion of the collection contains correspondence between O'Connell and a miscellaneous collection of personal friends and acquaintances in Rome. This category was maintained by O'Connell's office as distinct from the general correspondence, according to rules that are not now entirely clear. The fact that a correspondent lived in or wrote from Rome was not the sole criterion for letters to be filed here: Merry del Val and the rest of O'Connell's Roman circle are not here, for example, but are rather in the General Correspondence [#2]. The items here are much more isolated, and are apparently from persons who knew the Cardinal less well.⁶

A great many of these letters relate to O'Connell's sending money to Italy for a variety of reasons: mass intentions for Italian priests; special collections and funds; gifts; and so on. Many more letters are from Italians asking O'Connell [as a "rich American"] for financial assistance. Such letters are especially frequent immediately after the First World War and quite often pertain to artistic and archeological projects in Rome [the restoration of churches, for example]. More often than not, these letters went unanswered. The Cardinal also seems to have transacted business regularly with certain Roman merchants.

This portion of the collection is predominantly in Italian. Because of the time required for mail to cross the Atlantic by ship, there is usually a large gap between the date of an incoming letter and the date of the outgoing response. The Archives has therefore departed from strict chronological order in arranging this correspondence: a response is filed immediately following the letter it answers, according to the date of the first letter.

6. Correspondence with Nuns. 1906-1943. Box: 14. Folders: 1-4.

Chronological.

This portion of the collection contains correspondence between O'Connell and the members of women's religious orders. These are mainly, though not exclusively, nuns located within the Archdiocese of Boston. This correspondence is entirely personal and has nothing to do with the staffing or operation of the nuns' communities or the institutions associated with them.

The letters are of several general types. They include congratulatory messages to O'Connell on special occasions: his birthday; the anniversary of his ordination or elevation to the episcopate; the feast of St. William [January 10]. These letters were frequently accompanied by gifts, including flowers, preserves, canned fruits and vegetables, and other items. There are also several "spiritual bouquets," interesting for the study of devotional life and popular religious art. Also included are letters from O'Connell to individual nuns, usually conveying his greetings to them on special occasions such as anniversaries.

This correspondence is limited, both in size and content. It does show, however, that members of women's religious orders did write O'Connell regularly and that their letters were systematically preserved as such.

7. Associations and Clubs. 1907-1940.Box: 14. Folders: 5-10.

Alphabetical; chronological.

This portion of the collection contains the correspondence of Cardinal O'Connell relating to a number of civic and social organizations, and is divided into three main sections. The first contains the Cardinal's correspondence with the officers and members of the local organizations of which he was a member. This section is arranged alphabetically by the name of the club.

O'Connell joined several associations when he became Archbishop in 1907, and he participated regularly in their activities. These associations included some of the most important social groups of Brahmin-Yankee

Boston: the Winter's Night Club; the Wednesday and Thursday Evening Clubs; and the Puddingstone Club. The Cardinal was also elected to membership in the Allston Golf Club and The Country Club in Brookline. It is likely that, in most cases, O'Connell was the only Catholic member of these groups, invited to join because of his prominent position. When he was raised to the rank of Cardinal in 1911, he withdrew from all these associations, apparently as a matter of policy. This first section of the correspondence is, therefore, dated before that time.

The second section of this correspondence consists of letters, arranged chronologically, with organizations which elected O'Connell to honorary membership but in which he did not take an active part. Designation as an honorary member was usually the result of O'Connell's giving permission for his name to be used in support of some particular activity; rarely, this permission would be accompanied by a financial contribution from the Cardinal. For most of the organizations represented in this section there is only one exchange of correspondence. The associations are mainly, though not entirely, located in the Boston area, and include the Red Cross and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Finally, this portion of the collection also contains invitations, arranged chronologically, from local organizations of which O'Connell was not a member, asking him to attend their meetings. Such invitations were usually refused.

8. Special Projects. Boxes: 14-15. Folders: 19 [total]

During Cardinal O'Connell's tenure as Archbishop, he was involved in a variety of activities and projects which did not relate directly to the administration of the Archdiocese. Of these, three in particular made substantial demands on his time and energy, and generated a large volume of correspondence: his membership on the Board of Trustees of the Boston Public Library; his involvement with his winter home, "The Hermitage," at Nassau in the Bahamas; and his work to restore his titular church, San Clemente, in Rome. This portion of the collection contains the correspondence, described in detail below, for each of these projects.

1. Boston Public Library. 1932-1936. Box: 14. Folders: 11-15. Chronological.

Cardinal O'Connell was appointed to the Board of Trustees of the Boston Public Library by Mayor James M. Curley in November 1932. The official appointment documents are included here, although this file does not substantially begin until July 1934.

Most of the material in this portion of the collection consists of correspondence between O'Connell and Milton Edward Lord, Director of the Library. Lord sent O'Connell copies of the agenda for meetings of the Board, which were held biweekly from October to June. These agendas are included here and cover a great many topics in considerable detail: personnel matters; budget requests; expenditures; the administration of special funds; library programs and activities; and the acquisition of special collections. These files also contain some correspondence between O'Connell and his fellow trustees, Frank W. Buxton and Louis E. Kirstein. O'Connell served as President of the Board in 1934, but resigned as a Trustee in May 1936.

This correspondence shows O'Connell to have been an active member of the Board. It is also an excellent source for studying the administration and activities of the Boston Public Library during these years.

2. The Hermitage. Nassau, The Bahamas. 1930-1945. Box: 15. Folders: 1-8. Chronological.

Cardinal O'Connell purchased the estate known as The Hermitage early in 1930 and used it regularly thereafter as a winter resort. In that year and for the ten years following, O'Connell would leave Boston shortly after New Year's Day and return by the end of March. In addition to his own winter residence, this estate also served as the headquarters for missionary activity in the Bahamas.

This portion of the collection contains the correspondence between the Cardinal [in Boston] and those at the Hermitage during the year; there is no correspondence here for the time when O'Connell was actually in Nassau. [Correspondence between the Hermitage and Boston while the Cardinal and his party were in Nassau has filed in section #10, with other material relating to the Cardinal's trips.] The principal correspondent is the Most Reverend John Bernard Kevenhoerster, O.S.B., Vicar Apostolic of the Bahamas. The two would write regularly during the course of the year, discussing a number of subjects. Kevenhoerster would oversee the estate's caretakers and give O'Connell periodic reports of work being done. He would also describe his own religious activities, centering on the local parish, St. Anselm's church. The church building [a blueprint for which is included here] was constructed partially with funds provided by O'Connell. Other correspondents include the Reverend Bonaventure Hansen of the Benedictine priory at Nassau and the superiors of the community of nuns there.

In April 1940, O'Connell gave the estate to Kevenhoerster for "religious and educational purposes." The house was maintained for the Cardinal and correspondence continued, although O'Connell did not visit the island after that time. This collection also contains a few items of correspondence between Kevenhoerster and Monsignor Jeremiah F. Minihan, concerning the former's sale of the property in 1945, a year after O'Connell's death.

3. San Clemente, Rome. 1911-1941. Box: 15. Folders: 9-14. Chronological.

All members of the College of Cardinals receive a "titular" church at the time of their elevation. The titular church is a church within the city of Rome, often one that no longer has an active parish associated with it. A cardinal does not have any real jurisdiction over this church and the administration of its affairs, which are usually entrusted to a rector and his staff. The designation is, therefore, largely honorific for both the church and the cardinal. The theory behind this custom is that the Pope, as Bishop of Rome, needs to have around him in the other churches of Rome, his principal advisers and assistants, the cardinals. In practice, the titular church usually serves as the headquarters for foreign cardinals when they are in Rome.

Cardinal O'Connell's titular church was the Basilica of San Clemente, on the Via S. Giovanni Laterano. This church occupied a site containing the ruins of various early Christian shrines and structures, the basilica itself having been constructed some time in the twelfth century. When O'Connell assumed "title" to this church on his elevation to the cardinalate in 1911, San Clemente was staffed and maintained by Irish Dominicans.

This portion of the collection contains O'Connell's correspondence with the priests at San Clemente, especially the long-time prior, the Reverend Louis Nolan, O.P. O'Connell took a great interest in the church immediately after his elevation, and he was the primary source of funds to support the extensive archeological excavation of the church's catacombs. Much of the correspondence describes that work in some detail and presents financial accountings of how the money was being spent. At one point, O'Connell asked for and was receiving monthly reports of this kind from Father Nolan. This archeological work seems to have been interrupted by the First World War and was never actively pursued thereafter: although the correspondence is very detailed until 1917, it becomes very random after that date, with a complete absence of material for the years 1918-1927. Also included here are formal greetings exchanged between the Cardinal and the priests of San Clemente annually around the 23rd of November, the feast of Saint Clement.

These letters show Cardinal O'Connell to have been an active supporter of the restoration of this Roman church which was, in some senses, "his."

9. Charitable Donations. 1907-1944. Box: 16. Folders: 1-7. Chronological.

This portion of the collection contains the correspondence generated as a result of O'Connell's miscellaneous financial contributions to a variety of charitable agencies and institutions. The beneficiaries of the Cardinal's contributions are for the most part local to the Boston area. Likewise, they are single, one-time donations only and are usually of small amounts.

Certain charities emerge from these letters as the recipients of O'Connell's charity repeatedly over the course of several years. Among these are the Massachusetts General Hospital, the Red Cross, the Boy and Girl Scouts, and the North End Dispensary, Boston. It is also noteworthy that O'Connell was a regular supporter of the United Irish League, an organization working for Irish home rule in the early 1910s.

These letters give some idea of the broad demands made on the Cardinal's charity apart from church-related organizations, as well as the nature of his attempts to meet those demands.

10. Trips. 1913-1941. Boxes: 16-17. Folders: 24 [total]. Chronological.

This portion of the collection contains the correspondence relating to Cardinal O'Connell's trips outside the Archdiocese. Included are some letters planning the details of making these trips, as well as letters from the Cardinal and his party while on the trips to those remaining at home in Boston.

O'Connell traveled a great deal, and these trips are of two major types. The first includes trips that were connected with a specific religious purpose, such as journeys to Eucharistic Congresses and pilgrimages of various kinds. Included here, among others, are papers relating to the Cardinal's pilgrimage to the Holy Land in 1924, his pilgrimage to Rome during the Holy Year of 1925, and his trip to Chicago for the Eucharistic Congress of 1926. There are a few items relating to his trip to Rome in 1939 for the conclave which elected Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli Pope Pius XII -- this the only conclave O'Connell attended in his 33 years as a Cardinal.⁷

The second type of trip represented in this file is O'Connell's own winter vacations. Although his earlier habits in this regard are unclear, throughout the 1930s [when he was in his seventies] O'Connell would spend approximately three months at The Hermitage in Nassau, The Bahamas. Included in this portion of the collection are letters between Nassau and Boston in the winters of 1931, 1933, and 1934. Also included are letters from O'Connell's winter vacations in Miami in 1940 and 1941.

These exchanges between O'Connell and his party on the one hand and those remaining in Boston on the other are of considerably more significance than might be at first suspected. Particularly important is the correspondence between Monsignor Francis L. Phelan [Frank], Chancellor of the Archdiocese, who remained in Boston, and Monsignor Jeremiah F. Minihan [Jerry], the Cardinal's secretary, who accompanied O'Connell to Nassau. These two would write to each other regularly, usually weekly. Phelan would carefully describe the activities of the Cardinal's office in their absence and would ask Minihan to present any special problems to O'Connell [referred to as H. E. -- His Eminence] for a decision. He would also report on the state of health of Moro, O'Connell's poodle who stayed in Boston, in some detail. Minihan would write back with decisions made and would, incidentally, also describe the group's vacation activities. As a result, this correspondence presents by far the most detailed picture of the actual routine administration of the Cardinal's office at that time. These letters also offer a good insight into the personal relationships among O'Connell's assistants.

11. Comments on Speeches. 1931-1934.Box: 17. Folders: 15-18. Chronological by speech.

As a public figure, Cardinal O'Connell was called upon to make a great many speeches on a variety of occasions. These formal public statements, which were collected and published over the years,⁸ were not usually very long and were presented at civic as well as religious events. This portion of the collection contains the letters written to O'Connell, praising his remarks, after four of these speeches:

- 1] True Christian Charity, 13 December 1931 [Sermons and Addresses, XI:6-11].
- 2] Christian Ideals, 10 January 1932 [S & A, XI: 16-22].
- 3] A speech on his golden jubilee as a priest, 8 June 1934 [S & A, XI:102-107].
- 4] Patriotism and the Gospel, 4 July 1934 [S & A, XI:108-117].

⁸ Sermons and Addresses of His Eminence William Cardinal O'Connell [Boston: Pilot Publishing Company, 1911-1938], 11 volumes.

In each case, the Archives has retained all the incoming letters and one copy of the standard reply which O'Connell made to them.

Two of these letters are particularly interesting. The address "Christian Ideals" contained the Cardinal's famous denunciation of the immorality of "crooners" and crooning. The speech received wide national publicity and brought published newspaper responses from such well-known crooners as Rudy Vallee and Bing Crosby. Most of the letters in this collection are from ordinary citizens, praising the Cardinal for his stand. More substantial is O'Connell's speech on his jubilee. This address apparently contained a vigorous condemnation of Nazi persecution of Jews in Germany, although this condemnation is not included in the published version of the speech. Still, the correspondence comes mainly from American Jewish organizations and individuals, thanking O'Connell for his statements, and gives an indication of the content of his remarks on that occasion.

12. Recollections of Seventy Years. 1933-1934. Box: 17. Folders: 18-21. Chronological.

This portion of the collection contains correspondence relating to the writing and publication of O'Connell's autobiography, Recollections of Seventy Years [Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 1934]. The earlier material consists largely of correspondence between the Cardinal and Frank W. Buxton of the Boston Herald, who read drafts of the work as it was being composed. As O'Connell and Buxton were friends of long-standing [they were both trustees of the Boston Public Library and were summer neighbors at Marblehead], these letters are quite candid and discuss topics of larger interest than simply the autobiography: there are brief early assessments of the presidency of Franklin Roosevelt, for example. The later material consists mainly of correspondence with Ferris Greenslet and Roger Scaife of Houghton Mifflin concerning the actual production, publication, and sale of the work. A photocopy of the New York Times review of the book [24 June 1934] is also included, as are letters from readers, expressing their satisfaction with it.

The Recollections constitute O'Connell's second and most complete attempt at autobiography. In 1926, on the occasion of his silver jubilee as a bishop, he published Reminiscences of Twenty-Five Years, 1901-1926. This brief essay was published with testimonial letters from a number of dignitaries in a paperbound edition, and covers the period of O'Connell's life after his appointment as Bishop of Portland. It concentrates on discussing the great men he had known. The Recollections is a more detailed work, containing O'Connell's memoirs of his childhood, education, and early career.

13. Honors. 1912-1937. Box: 18. Folders: 1-8. Chronological.

This portion of the collection includes correspondence and other material relating to various honors presented to O'Connell during his career. Included are: the reception given him by the Archdiocese on his return from Rome in 1912 after his elevation to the cardinalate; the celebration of his golden jubilee as a priest in 1934; and his reception of an honorary degree from Harvard University in 1937. There is also some material connected with O'Connell's election to certain church-related honorific groups [the Knights of Malta, for example].

The material relating to the Boston reception of 1912 consists mainly of correspondence generated in planning the event by Monsignor James O'Connell. These letters provide a detailed description of the event, and include some memorabilia [banquet programs, souvenir postcards, etc.].

The material relating to O'Connell's golden jubilee likewise consists of correspondence connected with planning the celebration, including a hymn [a setting of [Ecce Sacerdos Magnus] composed for the occasion by Rev. Arthur Hagan of Wrentham. Also included is a copy of the golden jubilee book presented to O'Connell by the Catholic University of America, containing letters from President Franklin Roosevelt and forty-three state governors. The original letters are bound into a single volume which was published together with other speeches and items connected with the celebration. O'Connell sent autographed copies of this book to all those who contributed letters to it, and their replies thanking him are also included here, arranged alphabetically. This portion of the collection is valuable primarily for its autographs.

The material relating to the honorary degree from Harvard is somewhat random, consisting mainly of letters of congratulations and O'Connell's replies.

14. Income Tax. 1925. Box: 18. Folder: 9. Chronological.

The five items included in this portion of the collection relate to the audit, conducted in 1925 by the Internal Revenue Service, of Cardinal O'Connell's income taxes for the years 1920-1923. The reasons for conducting this audit of the returns filed by O'Connell as the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Boston, A Corporation Sole [the legal name of the Archdiocese], are unknown. These documents contain certain financial information relating to O'Connell's income and the tax adjustments to it. The precise nature of those adjustments is unclear in the absence of the tax returns themselves. The audit showed that the Cardinal owed slightly over $4500 for the four tax years, 1920-1923. This amount was paid at the conclusion of the audit.

15. Greetings from Cardinals. 1918-1943. Box: 18. Folders: 10-17. Alphabetical.

This portion of the collection contains the formal greetings to O'Connell from other members of the College of Cardinals, written largely on ceremonial occasions. The more substantial letters from Cardinals are included in the General Correspondence [#2, above]. Some of these letters are handwritten by the Cardinals, although most are printed letters that have been signed; some are handwritten by secretaries and signed by the Cardinals. They are mostly letters addressed to O'Connell, although in a few cases copies of his outgoing letters have been kept. The letters are generally written in Latin or Italian.

Members of the College of Cardinals customarily sent each other greetings at Christmas. These letters, usually dated and mailed on the 25th of November, are the most frequent type included here. Cardinals would also write to the other members of the College when they were elevated to that rank: those letters, which are more likely to be in manuscript, are also included.

All these letters were saved by O'Connell's office and, over the years, amounted to a collection of considerable bulk. The Archives has not retained all these letters, however. Rather, a few representative letters from each of the Cardinals who wrote to O'Connell have been kept; the others have been discarded. Samples of letters from 113 Cardinals are included here. These items are valuable principally for their autographs.

16. Death and Funeral. 1944-1945. Box: 18. Folders: 18-19. Chronological.

This portion of the collection contains material relating to Cardinal O'Connell's death on 22 April 1944, at the age of 84, his funeral in Holy Cross Cathedral, and his burial on the grounds of St. John's Seminary, Brighton. Included are the minutes of the meeting of the diocesan consultors which convened immediately on the Cardinal's death and elected Auxiliary Bishop Richard J. Cushing as Administrator of the Archdiocese until a new Archbishop could be chosen. [Cushing himself was, of course, chosen.] Also included are some documents related to the planning for the funeral, Cushing's eulogy preached at the funeral mass, and a copy of O'Connell's will. There is also some material, extending into 1945, concerning the construction of the burial chapel/mausoleum for O'Connell at St. John's Seminary.

Missing Material

There is evidence that a number of letters to Cardinal O'Connell from prominent figures have been lost or stolen during the intervening years. These letters, valuable for their autographs as well as for the information they contain, were clearly included with the O'Connell Papers at one time. Their original filing folders contained an itemization of the letters by date and in some cases also included summaries of the contents. These letters were not found in the processing of this collection by the Archives in 1978 and 1979. The correspondents include every President of the United States from Theodore to Franklin Roosevelt as well as several other notable names.

The following is as complete a list of these missing items as it is possible to reconstruct at the present time:

Calvin Coolidge:	6 August 1923 29 December 1923 13 October 1924 2 October 1926 30 July 1928 24 December 1928
Warren G. Harding:	23 October 1922 31 October 1922 14 November 1922 28 November 1922 27 January 1923
Herbert Hoover:	1 November 1930 -- second page, containIng signature, of 2-page letter, 12 March 1941
Charles Evans Hughes:	31 March 1923
Robert Lansing:	27 April 1917; State Department #012./9114
Benito Mussolini:	4 July 1926
Franklin Delano Roosevelt:	1933 [probably March] 1934 [late January or early February]
Theodore Roosevelt: William Howard Taft:	3 October 1908 October 1911 March 1914 2 letters, dates unknown, re O'Connell visit to Taft home, Beverly, Massachusetts 1 letter, date unknown, re Boston Red Cross Endowment Fund Committee
Woodrow Wilson:	November 1912 May 1915 December 1915

All of these missing items have been reported to the Register of Lost or Stolen Archival Materials, published by the Society of American Archivists.

Discarded Material

Like many working offices, Cardinal O'Connell's office seems to have kept and filed nearly every piece of correspondence it received. There was very little "weeding" of files or discarding of useless material. In arranging this collection of O'Connell Papers, the Archives has attempted to appraise the long-term historical value of the collection and to exercise its judgment by discarding certain valueless material.

The appraisal of documents is one of the most difficult aspects of the archivist's job. In the case of personal papers such as these, appraisal does not include a consideration of long-term legal or administrative uses.

More important are such considerations as the value of the records for the evidence they provide on important aspects of the individual's life and career, the historical information they contain on a broad range of topics relating to the individual, and the variety of different uses to which they can be put by researchers of all kinds. The argument that "someday somebody might be interested" in a given topic is, in itself, not usually a sufficient justification for retaining records of an ephemeral nature. The importance of records appraisal becomes all the more important when dealing with modern collections of very large bulk such as this one.⁹

In attempting to apply these principles to the O'Connell Papers, the Archives has identified approximately one cubic foot [out of a total of approximately six cubic feet] of records which were of insufficient value to warrant their retention. That material has been destroyed. Because its very existence may provide some information, however, a description of this material is provided below.

1. Correspondence with E. W. Dawson of Thomas Cook and Son. Cook's was the travel agent used by O'Connell for all major tours and pilgrimages. Dawson, director of Cook's Boston office, was responsible for planning the details of these trips and, in that process, engaged in extensive correspondence with the Cardinal's office. Every conceivable detail of this planning was represented in these files: the steamships to be used; the assignment of cabins; rates and fees; tentative schedules. Dawson was clearly inclined not to make any decisions on any subject without obtaining the Cardinal's explicit approval. Despite this great bulk [often the result of daily correspondence], however, these files yield no information that bears on O'Connell's life. The more substantive material pertaining to these trips, which had been filed separately by the Cardinal's office, is contained in section #10 [Trips].

2. Pilgrimage Testimonial Letters. In order to be accepted to accompany the Cardinal on a pilgrimage, lay persons apparently had to ask their pastors to write a letter to O'Connell, stating that the person in question was a member in good standing of the parish. These letters contained no more information than that, stating simply the person's name and the name of the parish.

3. Sympathy Letters. O'Connell received a great many letters from all over the country on the death of his older brother Luke in July 1931. O'Connell replied to these briefly, thanking the writer for the expression of sympathy.

4. Miscellaneous Invitations. Because of his prominent position, O'Connell received a great many invitations to a variety of occasions and events as a matter of course. Nearly every Catholic college and university in the United States would invite him every year to their commencement. Bishops and auxiliary bishops would invite him to their consecrations, installations, and jubilees. Prominent local citizens would invite him to the marriages of their children. Public officials would invite him to any number of receptions and other events. O'Connell regularly declined these invitations by sending formal notes.

5. Miscellaneous Christmas Greetings. O'Connell would also receive Christmas and occasionally Easter greetings from miscellaneous sources. These were generally not answered.

6. Crank Letters. Like most prominent people, O'Connell occasionally received what may be best described as crank letters. Most of these seem not to have been kept by his office. One file that was retained in his office was a collection of letters from an elderly woman in East Weymouth. Beginning in January 1928 and continuing for most of the rest of that year, she wrote to O'Connell weekly, describing the perceived machinations of her "enemies" and exhorting the Cardinal: "I don't want your Eminence to give a cent of my money to anyone down here." There is no indication that O'Connell knew her or that he ever had any of her money to give. O'Connell did not respond to these letters. A number of pew rent records from Immaculate Conception Church, East Weymouth, sent in by this woman, have been retained in Record Group IV.A., as records of the church.

7. Greetings from Cardinals. The formal letters of greeting from other Cardinals not included in the representative sample in section #15, above, have been discarded.
