

Jeannine Hill Fletcher, Th.D.

Jeannine Hill Fletcher, Th.D. is Professor of Theology at Fordham University and board member of the grassroots social justice organization, the Northwest Bronx Community and Clergy Coalition—an inter-generational, multi-racial, multi-religious group organizing to address social justice issues in New York City and beyond.

Prof. Fletcher is a constructive theologian whose research is at the intersection of Christian systematic theology and issues of diversity (including gender, race and religious diversity).

She is the author of three books that examine the intersectional realities of religious diversity including her most recent, The Sin of White Supremacy: Christianity, Racism and Religious Diversity in America (Orbis, 2017). Other titles include Monopoly on Salvation? A Feminist Approach to Religious Pluralism and Motherhood as Metaphor: Engendering Interreligious Dialogue.
