

September 22, 2005 - Statement From Caritas Christi Health Care System Regarding Archbishop Seán O'Malley

As the result of a recent medical evaluation and at the recommendation of his physician at Caritas St. Elizabeth's Medical Center (CSEMC), the Most Reverend Seán Patrick O'Malley, Archbishop of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Boston, underwent routine testing for an acute inner ear infection yesterday.

The Archbishop was admitted and is in good condition and currently resting comfortably at the hospital. He expects to resume his normal schedule on Monday.
